Teachers Are Perplexing . . .

They don't think it's important for me to use my study hall for dreaming.

Sometimes they embarrass me by asking me to do problems on the board when they know I am not listening.

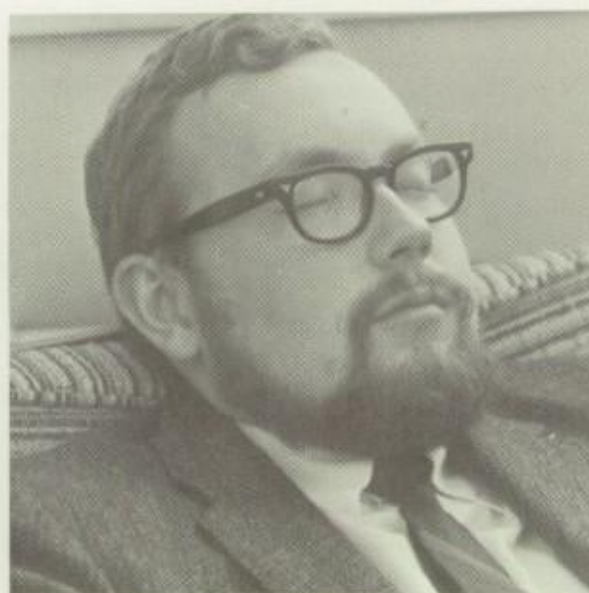

On occasion they are boring to absolute madness.

But teachers also make me feel good.

They are understanding and want to help me if I need someone to talk to.

They are encouraging when I feel creative, without being overbearing with their ideas.

They smile at me in the hall.

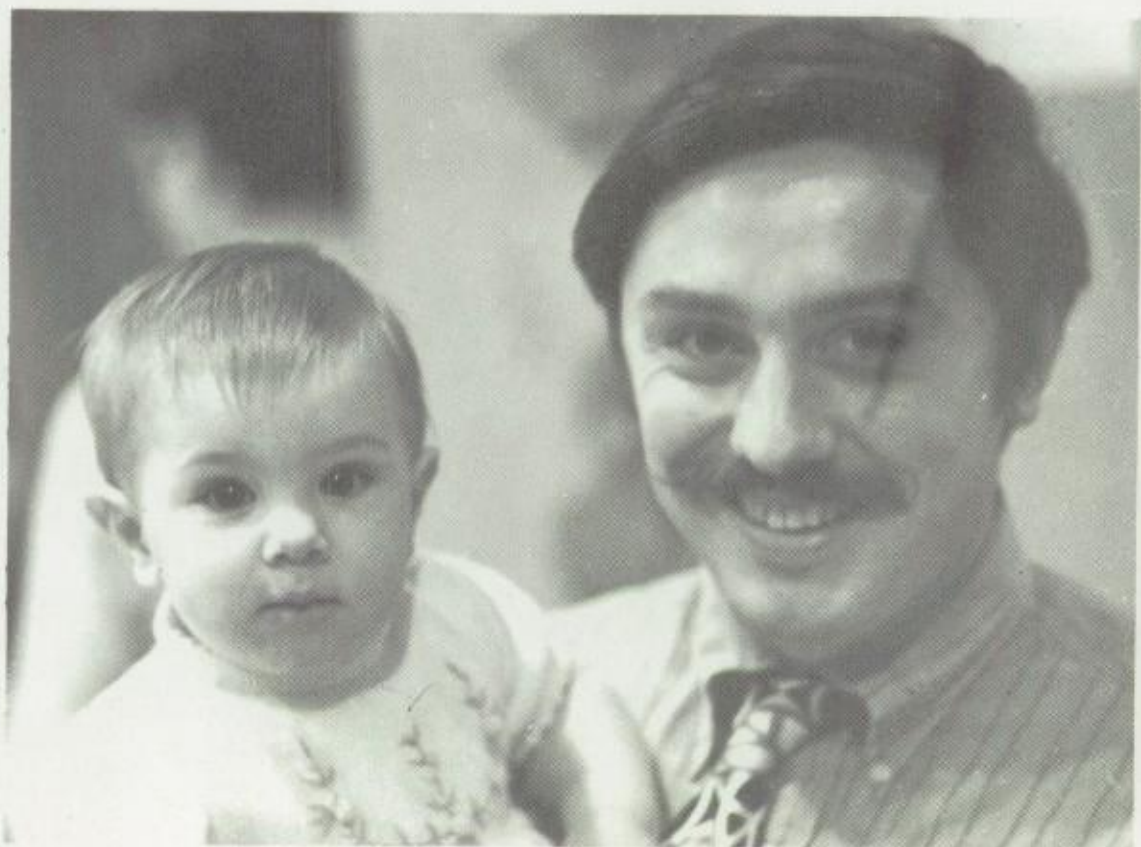

They listen to my excuse and give me another day.

They don't demand complete silence.

They remember what it was like.

Athletics

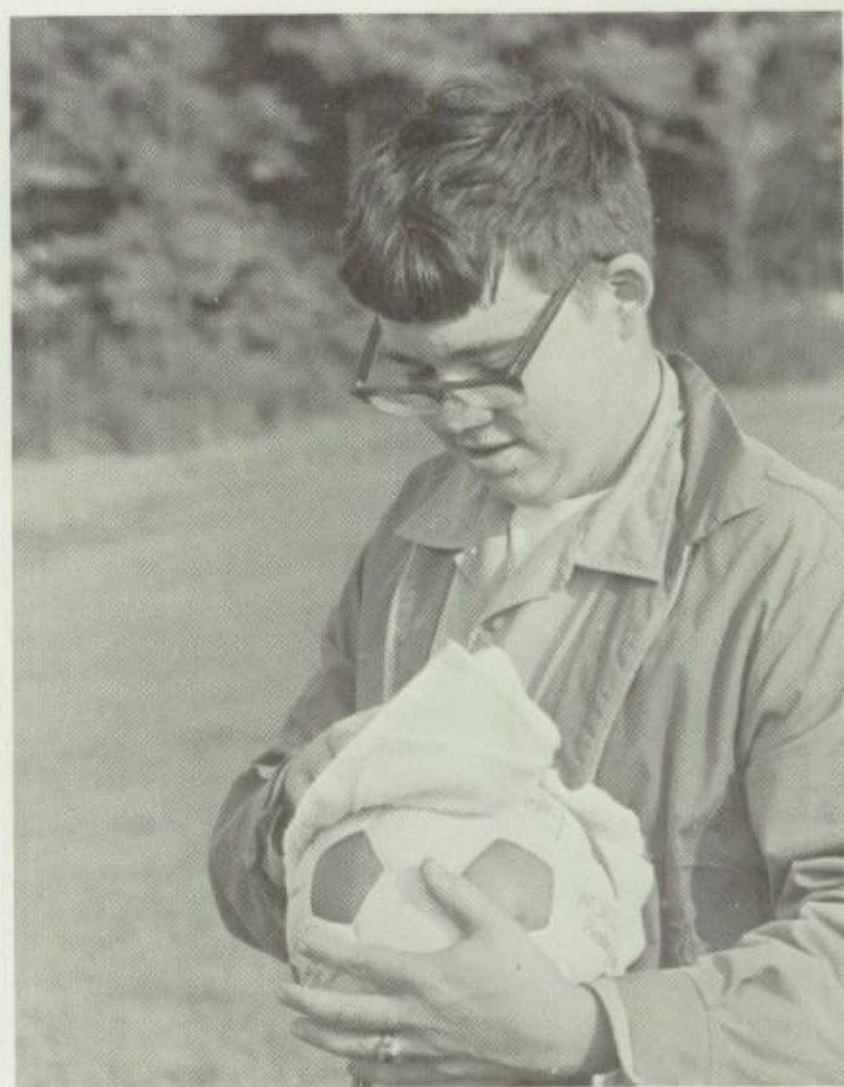

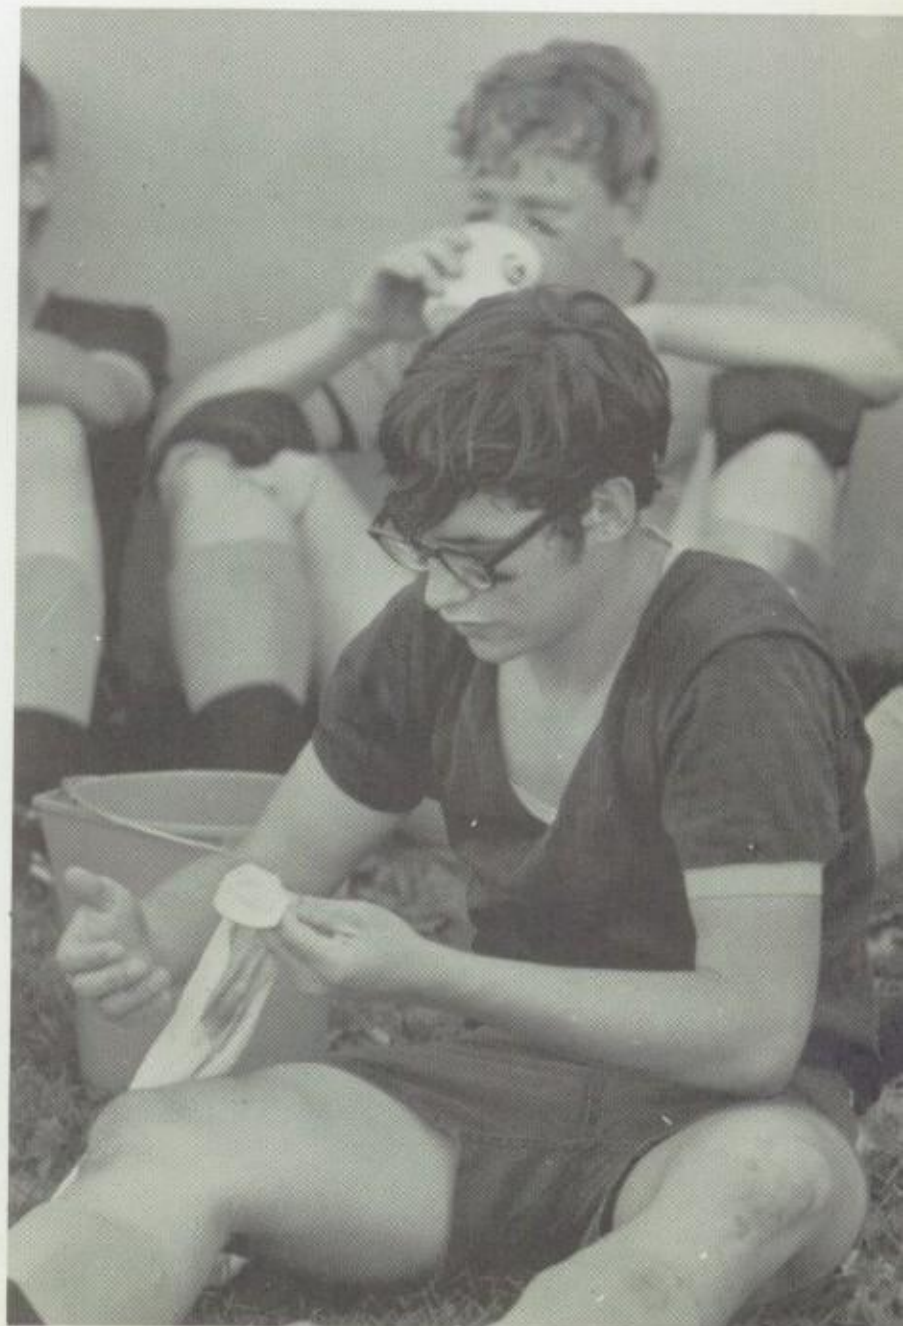

Soccer . . .

Each year around the end of September, the field behind the school becomes the arena — colored uniforms, flashing arms and legs, and sweat-streaked faces rush by in the constantly moving pattern of play.

And often, if not as often as we would like, a booming shot lands beyond the visiting goalie's reach.

Eddie, I to been really since knowing you,
To bad we couldn't have gotten to know
ya better. Have a fun summer. I'll

Sounds —

*grunts of exertion,
cries of pain,
cat calls and taunts.*

Exhaustion!

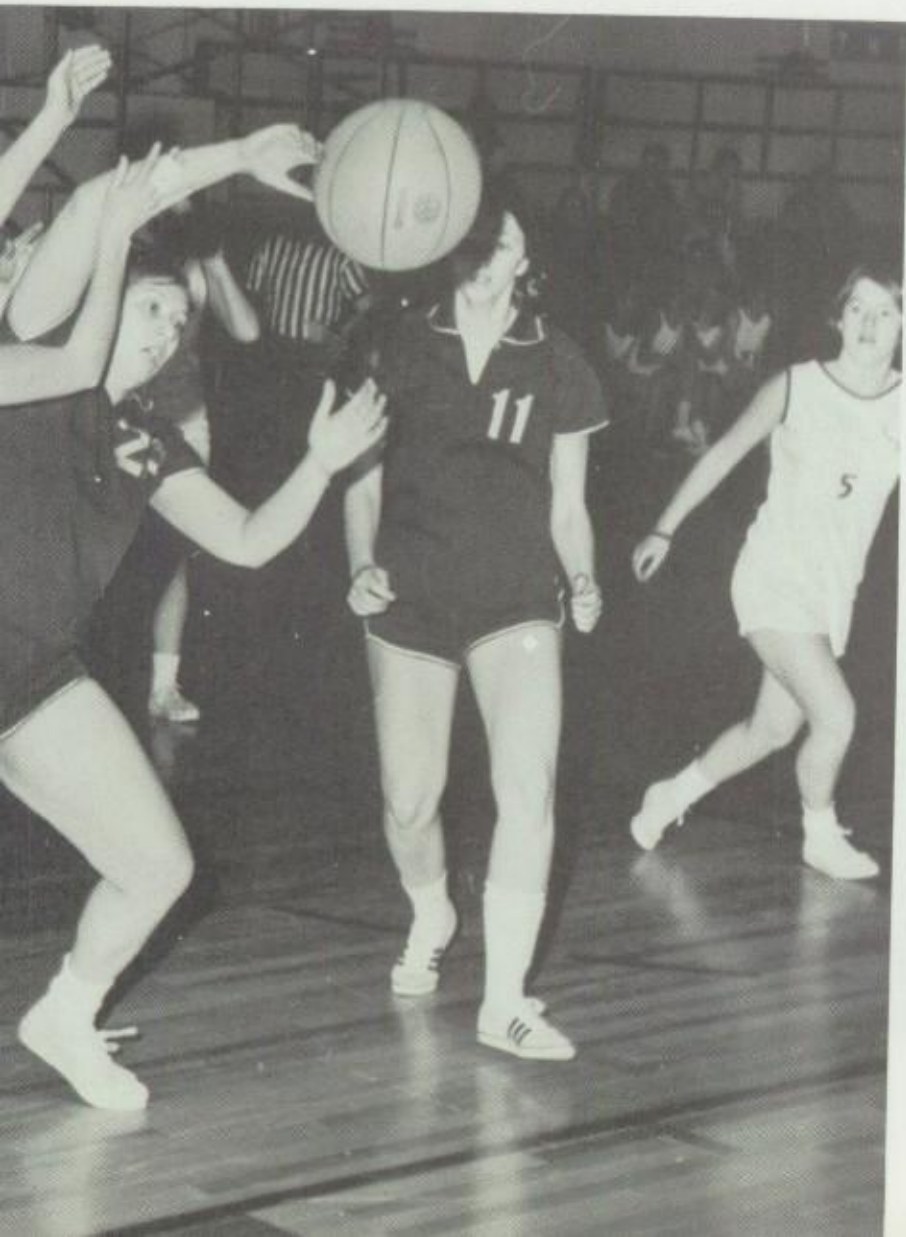

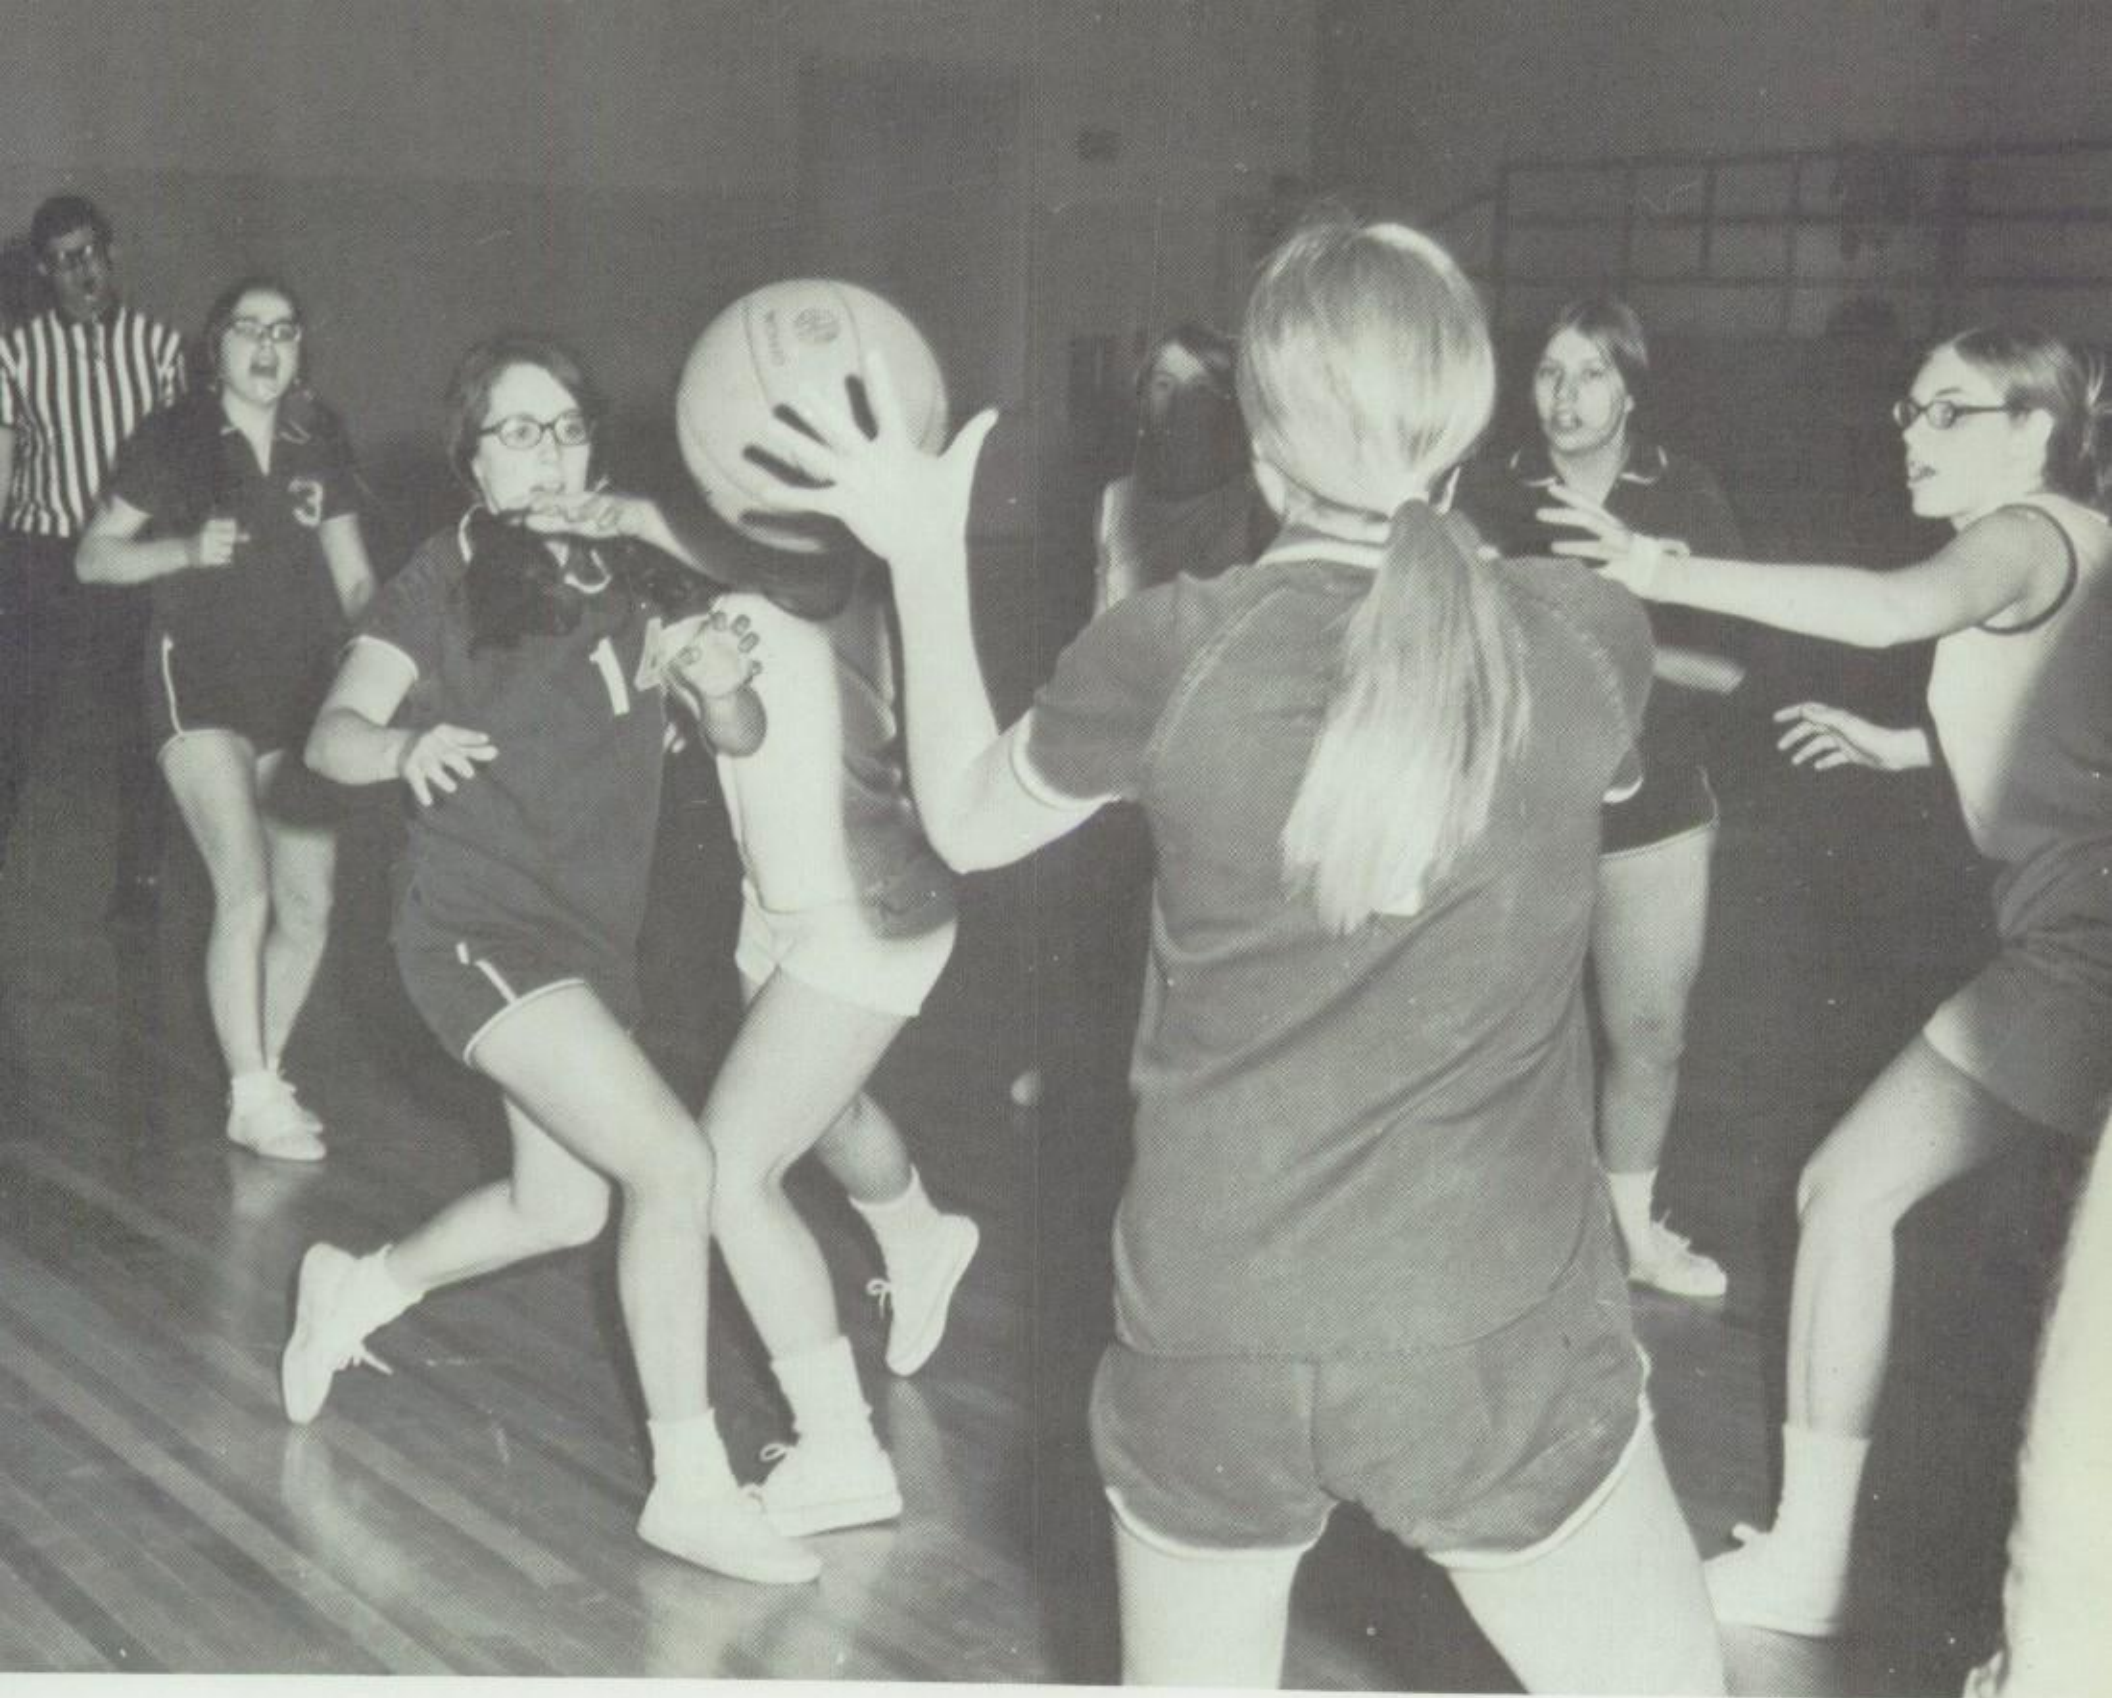

Girls' Basketball

*Tense faces and watchful eyes,
Drills performed so carefully.
Time ticking steadily by . . .*

Frequent winners, almost champions.

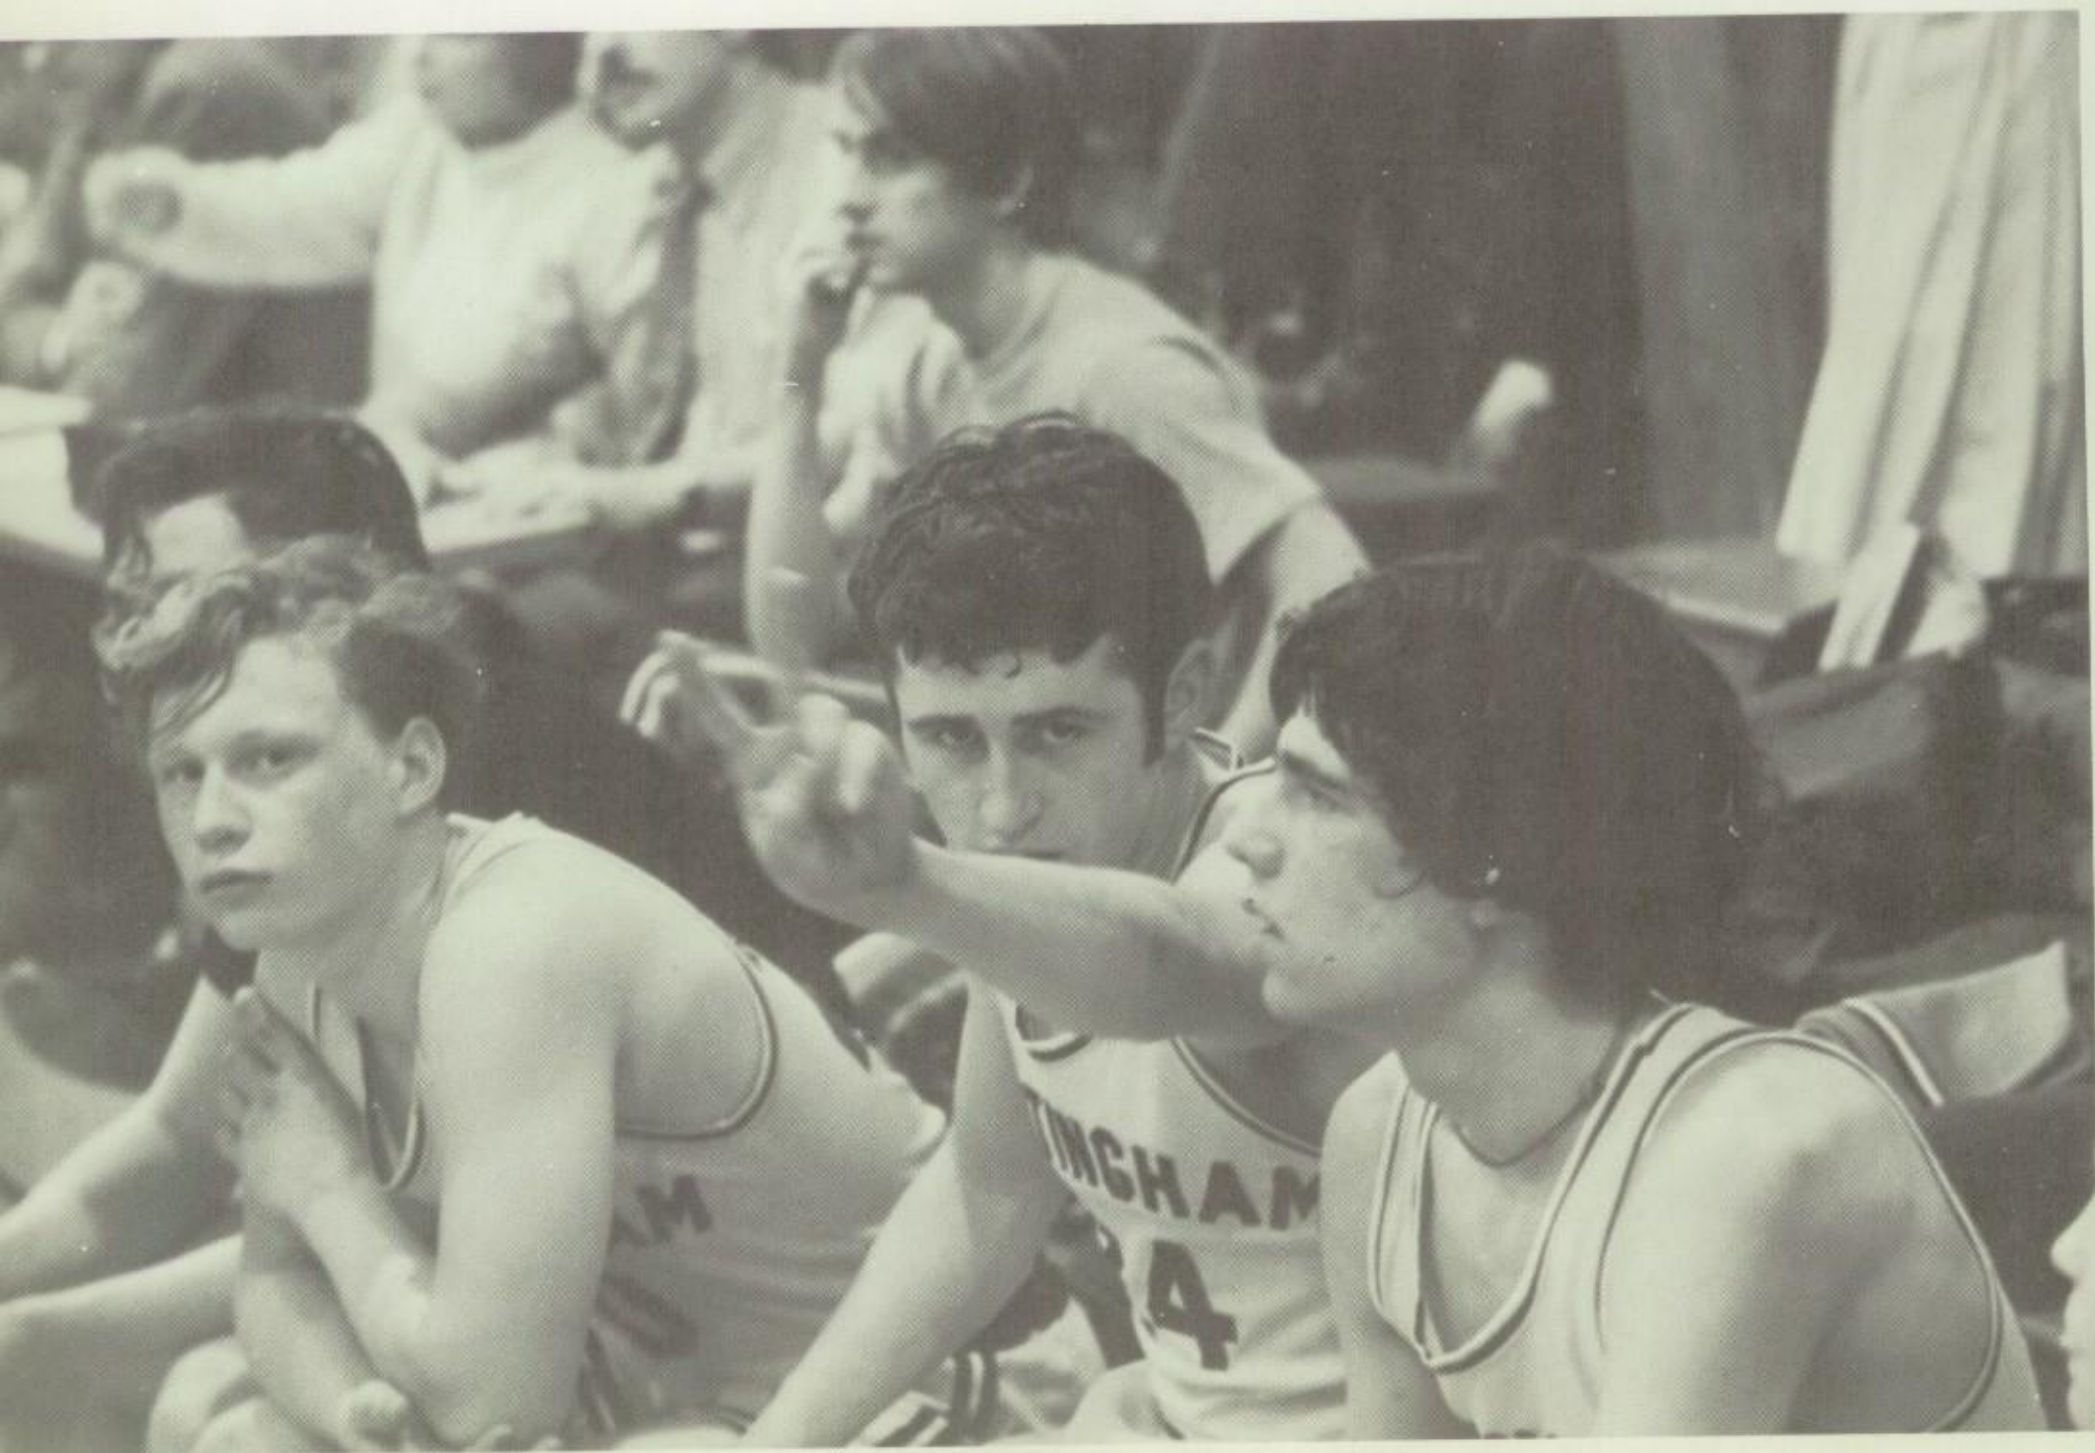

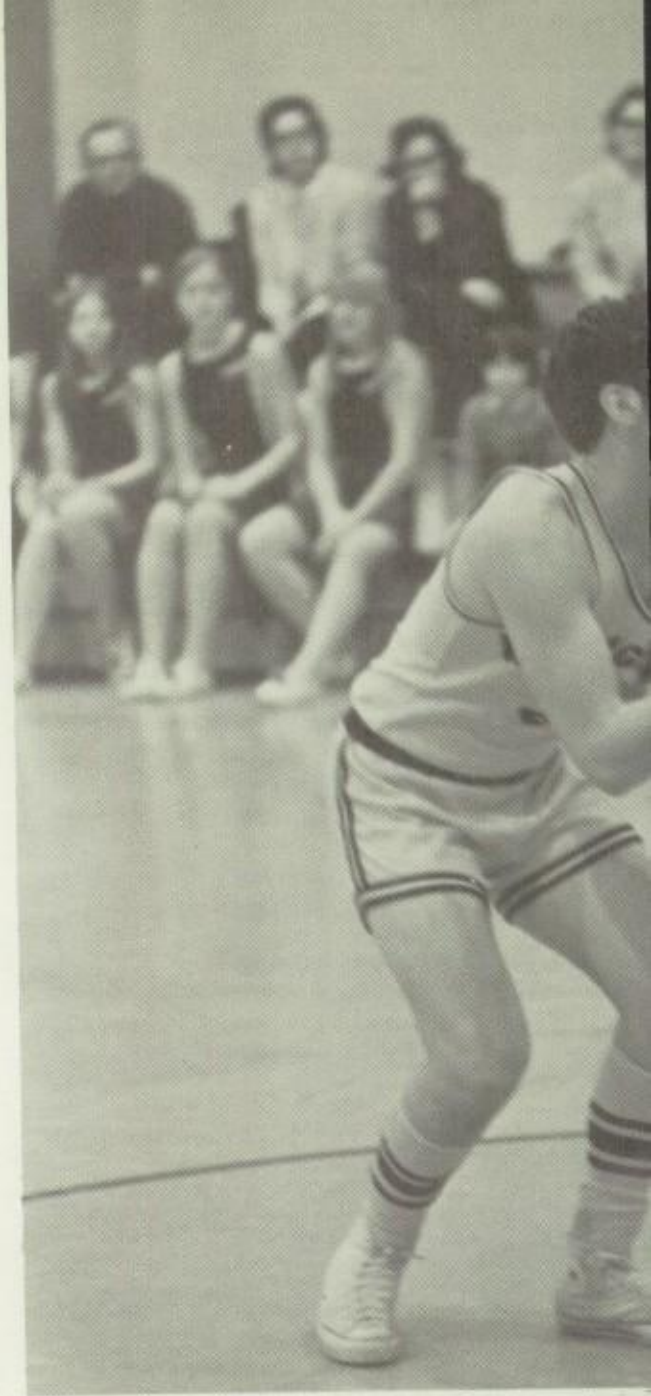

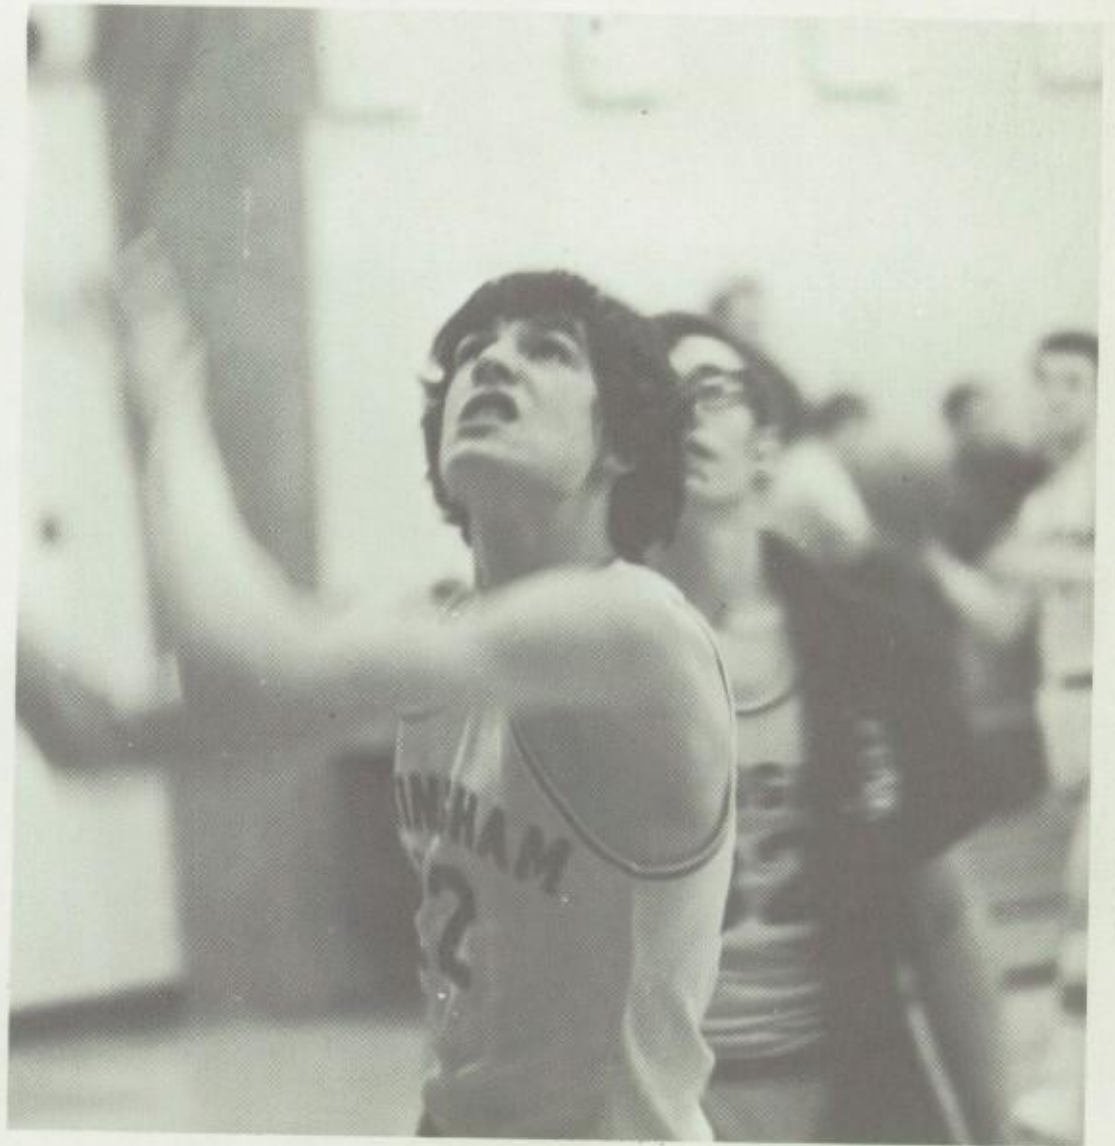

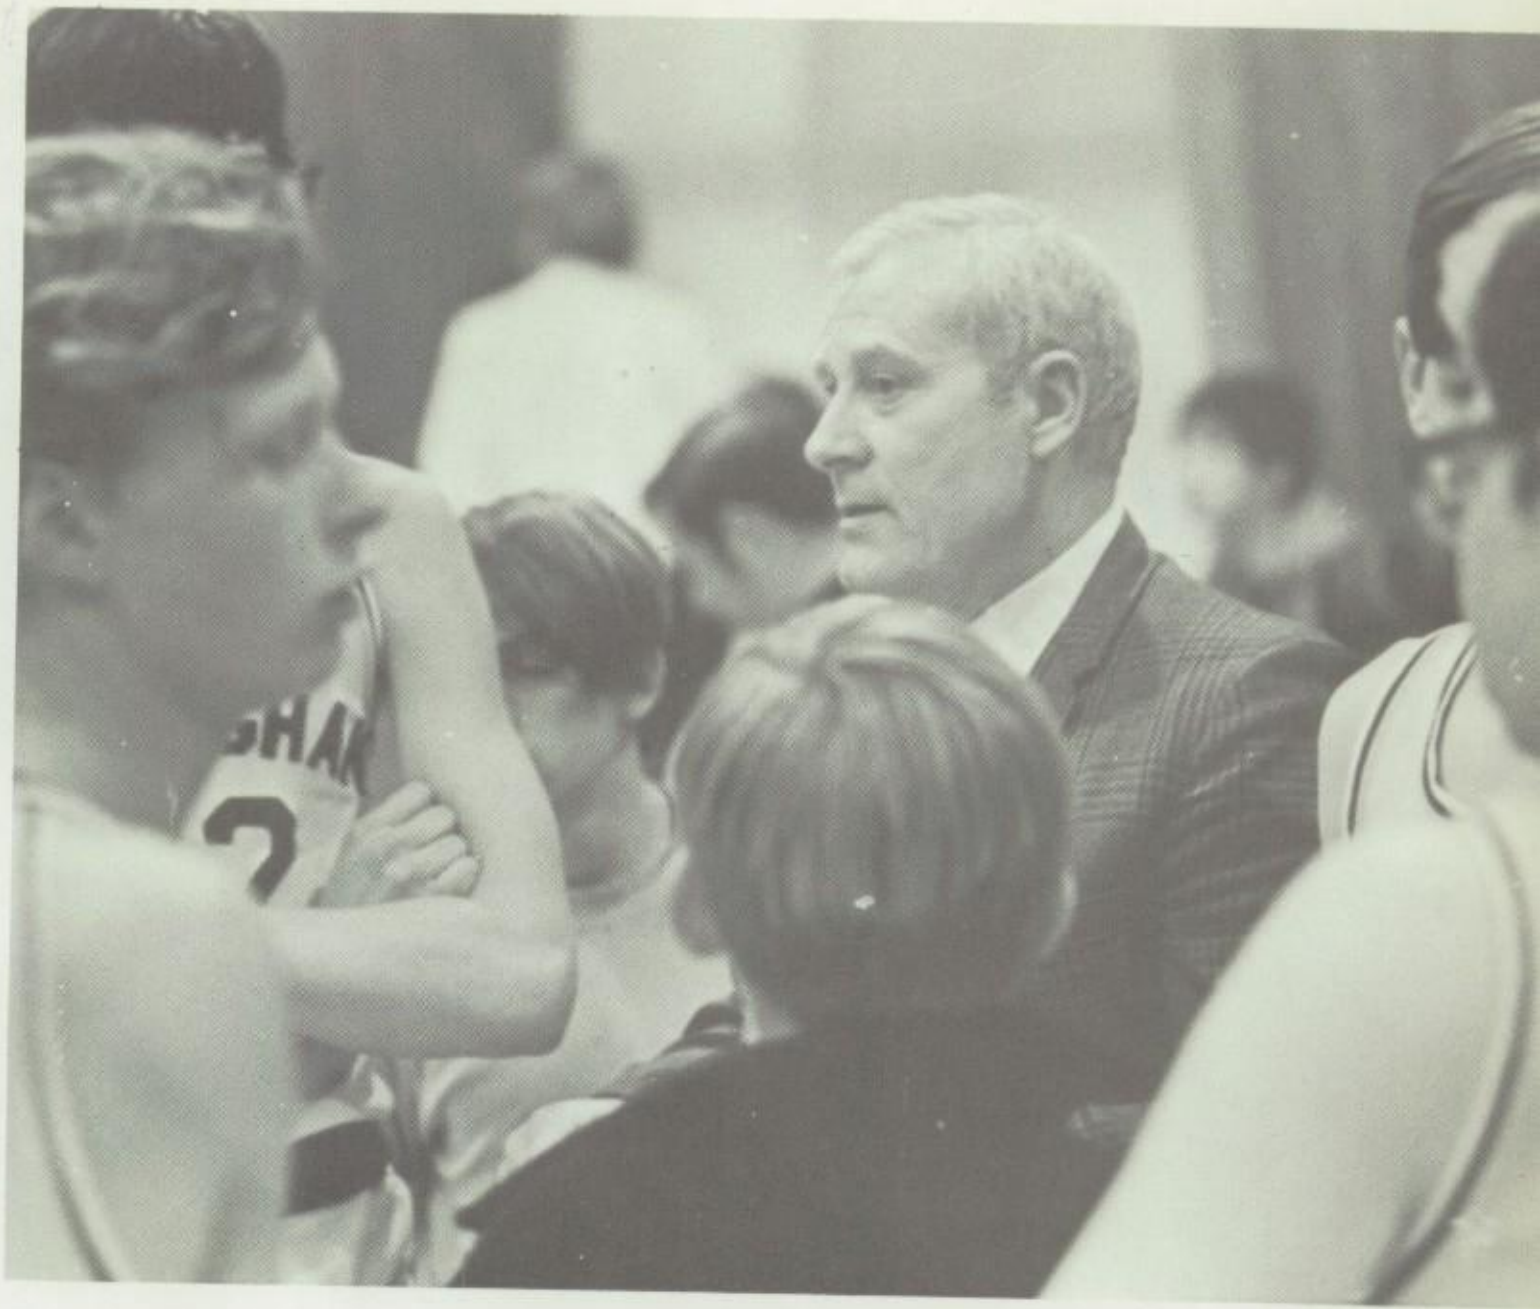

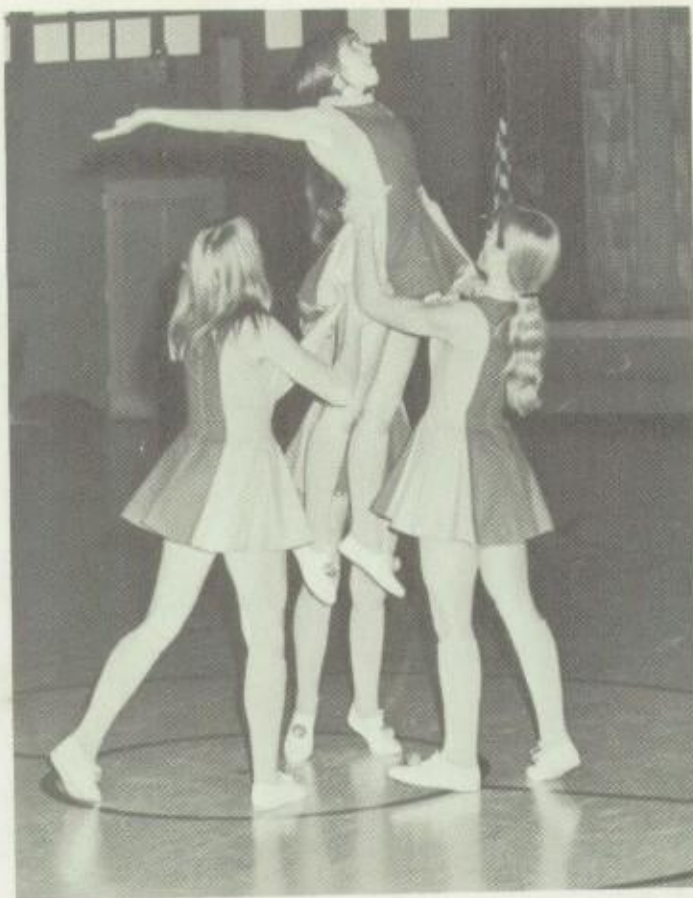

Boys' Basketball

*Tense faces,
A cry of madness.
The hook shot pauses on the rim, —*

Gymnastics

*Every effort is towards your individual performance
Thinking of form, of routine.
Forgetting the blurred spectators
Ignoring strained muscles
Concentrating on what comes next.*

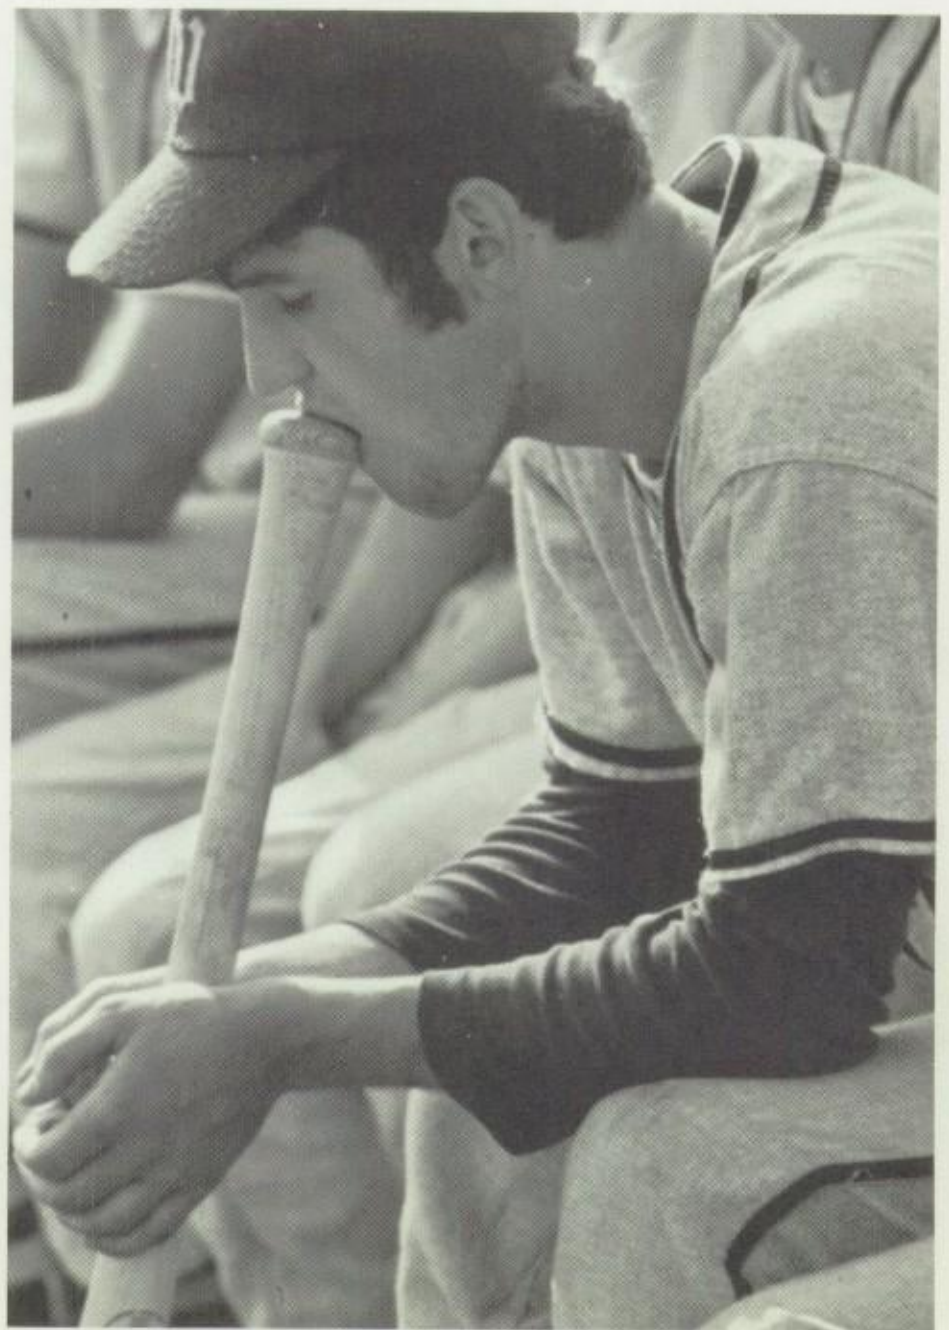

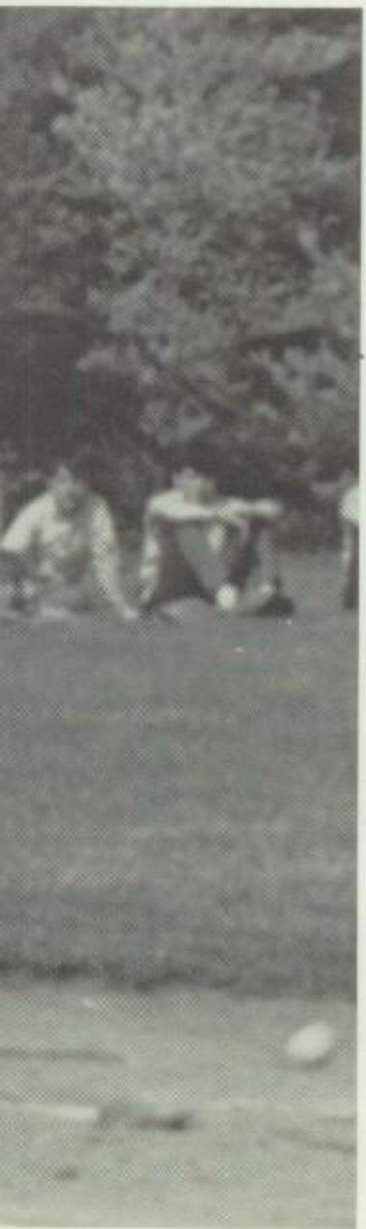

Baseball . . .

With thoughts centering only on the ball-game, each acts out his assigned part. The pitcher leans back and heaves the ball. The bat "smacks" against it. Seconds later the fielder lifts a glove high and pulls down the ball.
